Weather: By Chloe

It'll be WARM... highkey lit 78°F.

Then, COLD... lowkey vibes of 54°F.

With a bit of neutral. Fasho.

Still Truckin'

John Redstrom arrived in Camp on Thursday. You may notice additional Swamper faces in the crowd (approach carefully). Eric Redstrom remembrance is on the top of the list. Be sure to be there, for another chapter in the long, strange, trip.

Small Dog Cited for Impersonating Bear

Operating under the alias of Boo-Boo, Jack-Jack the dog was passing himself off to local blue jays and raccoons as the famous Hanna Barbera character. One of the Rangers, we believe to be named Sir, noticed the transgression, took away his pick-a-nic basket, and sent him away.

He awaits sentencing in Federal Court, and we all know how long that can take.

Get It Off Your Chest

Today at 10 AM, history will be made, history will be written. All Camp Evaluation in the Rec Hall. If you got something to say (and I'm sure you do...don't we all), this is the place to be.

Beam Me Up, Jessie

Rumor has it small child will channel the spirit of Leonard Neomoy, in character as his unforgettable Lt. Commander Spock, circa 1967, at the Talent Show this evening. Spoiler alert, message delivered by young medium will be: "Live, Long, and Prosper."

Tip Night

As you look back at the week, be mindful: no shopping, no cooking, no dishes. Your only responsibility: say thanks.

The countdown to collect tips for this the Camp Sierra Staff this evening is officially under way. People scurry across Camp to check ashtrays, couches, under the seat. On the other hand, we want something that folds.

Trendsetter, Lars Benson, has already recognized staff with fine imported jewelry. Let's not drop the ball - keep the high quality recognition in place.

Traffic Crisis at Hungry Hut

The State of California declares traffic emergency at the Hungry Hut, Shaver Lake, California. Now that the Hut is officially known as the slowest restaurant in California, CalTrans dispatches around the clock team to direct traffic to avoid gridlock.

Wendy, Jack and Ronald McDonald have all been consulted for strategies on how to deal with this ongoing crisis. More to come.

[Photographer J. Olsen sends his deepest regards for the loss of photo documenting said traffic chaos.]

Going twice.... Sold!

Big money changes hands at Auction. Total earned for Camp was $1,642! And if that impressive number doesn't seem like enough to you, make a donation (though due to changes in tax law, small children and pets can no longer be accepted as donated items).

Man Swims Many, Many Laps Around Big Creek Pool

Long term camper in his quest for triathlon excellence swims many, many laps. Local trout left flabbergasted by his showing, and tread water in amazement.

Trash Talk

Big news in Dumpster Technology. Someone has left a can of WD-40 next to the dumpster, giving Camp a first look exclusive on the latest, smoothest, most lubricated dumpster in town. And if you notice any squeaking, squirt it forward for the next Camper.

Start gathering up your trash and recyclables. You packed it in, now take it back out. And if you see something extra, please take it with you back down the hill.

Mono Hot Springs: The One True Hike

A review by Noah Friedman-Biglin 💧💧💧💧

After days of working our way through hike after hike, frustration, muddy ponds, and lily-less pools, finally we arrive at a destination fit for all-day hike day. The drive is demanding. The pass? Petrifying! But the reward is without equal in the Sierra.

Before the hiker even arrives at the parking area, they must brave the single-lane road which has daunted more than a few in its day! But, those that manage it are treated to views of Mt Banner and Mt Ritter in Southern Yosemite - popular backpacking destinations, standing comfortably over 10,000 feet high, whose snow-capped peaks will remain covered all year. Just past the views of the mountains is a stand of mountain juniper trees. These trees, with their hallmark twisted bark and tangled branches live to over 1000 years, often growing from the living rock, and with only one branch green to indicate that the tree still lives. It is well worth pausing amongst them.

The road to Mono contains secrets that must be earned through hard experience (park just before the small bridge and hike down to find one of the very best!), but arriving at the parking lot near the campground is not the end of the drive. Sure, some may pause by the river - the South Fork of the San Joaquin River - and those partially in the know will cross it and find some delightful hot springs - but those who have spent real time in these mountains will push past this first parking option and brave the deteriorating road, and park near the meadow (4-wheel drive is required to go any further). Once there, the hike to Doris Lake begins.

It is a mild hike, mostly uphill on the way out (so, mostly down on the way home!). The fires were smaller in this area, and there are patches of forest that remind us of how it all used to look. There are wild flowers - penstemon, and wild roses - aplenty! At the end of a short 1.25 mile walk, lies the lake. Fed by a natural hot spring, full of fish, and frequented only by those who know, Doris is a gem in the Sierra. Warm water, rocks for jumping, and shady areas to eat your bag lunch, this spot offers everything the hiker could want. Stop in at the small store in Mono Hot Springs Resort on your way out and enjoy a cold beverage before braving the drive home. 5/5 droplets, best hike of the year.

A review by David Laverine

Back in the mix! The snow over the pass was so amazing: 5 feet and drifts.

They had a sign out that said "Toad Crossing. Please drive at 10 miles an hour." I slowed down and heard them cracking.

Somehow, in the snow in the meadow at 9000 feet they must've just come out of hibernation, ready to make babies.

In the mostly snow covered pasture, the wildflowers were the best I've ever seen. So many at every turn; rocky granite cliffs covered in pink and orange. To the north and the south of the river range of Yosemite it was very full of snow. An hour and a half drive, but it is so worth it. The silly part is when you go over the pass, it's a one lane road and everyone I passed was so polite. I pulled off for some people, and they pulled off for me. The views are worth the drive alone.

Little Known Camp (and Area) Facts?

- The pay phone used to be on the store porch. Then it was in the parking lot.
- The Rec Hall has always been called the Assembly Hall ... since the days after it was known as "The Dining Hall"
- Back then, the front door to the Assembly Hall used to be an oven/fireplace
- Flying discs are not frisbees
- Shaver Lake maximum depth is 135 ft.

Assembly Hall/Rec Hall nee Dining Hall

Laverine Facts

Watch out for toads crossing in the snow. They come out of hibernation and they make babies. Do not exceed 10 miles per hour.

Have you finished your meal?

Ok - time to have your fortune cookie. Pick a letter (A, B, or C). Turn the page, and the appropriate letter is your fortune.

Fortune Cookies, continued...

A: It's better to give than to receive (yeah, right). But, for those receiving: tip big.

B: Research says, lighter cars get better gas mileage. Empty wallet in the tip jar.

C: You're going to regret not having some of this as a leftover at home. Be sure to tip big, they will spit next year.

Mountain Winds

"Just cause you're first, doesn't mean you were."

"What?"

"Was that BBQ great or what?"

"Stop touching it! Unless you're gonna buy it!"

"Are my lips in the sun...directly?"

"One scoop, is like two scoops."

"Lars is in a bidding war with himself!"

"Thank you. I don't really care. But thank you."
