Kid's Fishing Trip

Lots of lessons were learned, including how long it takes to tie that many hooks on that many rods. No fish were caught, but a great time was had by all.

Carnival WOO!

All Camp agrees that the Carnival should come back next year. You may be seeing a lot of folks today with new tattoos, fresh coats of nail polish, or some sort of face paint where there was not face paint before. All of these are signs of the incredible success of last night's carnival. Which raised $301!! Big thanks to Lars and Moriah! And big shoutout to Miles for winning the golden ticket!

Crafts Ends Early

Don't forget your kids.

Tie Dye Rinse

Tie-dye rinse. Repeat.

Happening today. If you have time, ask Ellen how you can help.

Feeling the Love

Thanks to all who came out to share memories and kind words about our recently departed campers. We are grateful for so many memories shared.

Auction

Show me the money. The auction is tonight. Featuring for one year only (unless he needs to do it again – because once you've done something at Co-op Camp, you're stuck with it forever): Evan Wilson! Hitting you with the patter that matters. And selling you all the things you didn't know you needed.

Don't forget to bring all your items to King (before lunch), and all your cash to dinner.

Karaoke

Camp's biggest sensation from last year makes it's dazzling (or deafening) return: starting with your favorite song, and ending, if last year is any indication, sometime around Friday morning. This is the perfect chance to warm those pipes up for the talent show. Rec Hall (probably).

All Camp Photo

Gather in the Meadow (Sport's Field? Another Camp identity crisis?) around 5:40, so that we can take a photo at 5:41. And another one at 5:47. And then a better one at 5:56.

Co-op's Got Talent?

Jessie Davidson is collecting sign ups right now for the talent show. Can you juggle? Are you able to eat a soap bubble and then blow it back out into the air? Sign up to show everybody how talented you are.

A Baseball Headline (see below headline)

Yankee's pitcher Domingo German just (yesterday) threw the 24th perfect game in baseball history, only took 99 pitches, the A's put up little resistance.

Shaver Flavors

A Review, by Jennifer Mclean-Madera

The Hungry Hut est. 1965 (I mean what a great year!) located on HWY 168 about halfway between Ken's Market and Shaver Pizza.

In Shaver Lake this is the place to go for burgers, hot dogs and the most amazing homemade milkshakes!! This is not a fast food place, be prepared to wait especially when it's busy.

Milkshake flavor choices are:

Chocolate, Vanilla, Oreo, Grandmas Berries, Peppermint, Coffee and Boysenberry.

Some flavors come with a special treat when you sip-could be pieces of cookie, coffee beans or fresh berries!

They will split a shake into two cups for $1 extra.

Definitely my favorite milkshakes!

Hunt for the Happy Hour

Happy Hour is a little further this evening at the Wedel cabin, #49. It's on Tiger Lily Lane, but there is a short-cut. Walk up the road and when you reach the Meadow Chapel, look up to your left. You will see a cabin with a green roof. There is a little path up to the cabin. Or you can continue a little further and turn left on Tiger Lily Lane. The all-camp photo is in the meadow at 5:41 so you will be able to scoot right down the path for the photo.

Plants Around Camp

Dictated, not read

Do you want to know how many edible plants there are around camp, trees included? There are currants, elderberries, gooseberries blackberries, black cap raspberries, and thimble berries! Up behind the swimming hole are some Filbert trees, which when roasted, are called hazelnuts. On campus we have Ponderosa pine, incense, cedar, black oak, Douglas fir, one giant sequoia by the rec hall, Alder in all the shaded water areas, plus a very sad Redwood in the ball field. Lots of wildflowers we normally don't see because they're so late this year are in bloom: sweet pea penstemon red phlox trillium vetch foxglove soap plant, which hasn't even budded up yet, lots of sweet peas, milkweed, Lupin, Chinese houses, Clarkia lots of yellow Mimulus, monkey flower golden brodiaea and purple brodiaea. On the trail to the potholes we identified the shrub that was everywhere called deer brush, Ceanothus.

All parts of the Mariposa Lily plant (pictured above) are edible: the leaves, flowers, seeds, but primarily the small bulbs. The bulbs were eaten raw, boiled, or roasted. Dried bulbs, and seeds, were ground into a powder for future use. The flowers and leaves were eaten outright. I have often seen insects, such as bees, flower beetles, flower flies, and others, visiting the flowers to collect or eat the pollen. The bulbs are also eaten by rodents such as gophers.

Thieves or a Prank Gone Bad?

Nefarious activity afoot. An item has gone missing from Double Lodge. You know who you are. And remember, revenge is a young man's game. Class action forming against DN and MB. Contact Matthew Macari to join.

Twin Frustrations

A popular hike in past years has been the journey to the Twin Lakes. This involves a slog up a dusty hill, and, after a brief jaunt through some delightful woods, a series of switchbacks up to Potter Pass (over 9,000 feet above sea-level). The hiker who manages this feat is rewarded with a muddy pond, and enough mosquitos for a lifetime. If you push on, there's a greater reward – a beautiful lake, with a stunning backdrop of high mountains and snow.

But this year, one can skip the slog. The snow banks start in the parking lot, and block an easy start to the hike. One can manage past the first snow, but the hike itself at that point primarily involves chasing blazes to try to find the trail after losing it beneath the summer snow. 0/5 droplets, skip it this year and go to Mono Hot Springs instead.

Recappy Hour

"Incredibly promising debut Happy Hour from the folks at Fir & Oak. Can't wait to see the spread at next year's Happy Hour!"

-Twin Pines Editors

Assistants to the Director of Happy Hour

Mountain Winds

"Now we're on a different deck."

"Slide is life!"

"Just bring the buzz, not the glass."

"I respect your opinion, but that still doesn't make the earth flat."
