ALL CAMP PHOTO

We know you love to reminisce, so make sure that you and your loved ones get into the All Camp Photo! Happening today at 5:41 in the Meadow. And don't worry, it always takes longer to get set up for the photo than to come to the picture. But don't be late! Not sure what to wear?? Your snazzy new tie dye is calling!

CARNIVALAOKE

Fish were caught, fortunes revealed, some folks might even be receiving postcards from camp in the near future! One thing we all can agree on from dusk to dark in the playground area the carnival spirit and the co-op collided in a magic evening. Huge huge props to Mariah for making it happen, and to all the folks who bought tickets and ran out the ticket booth netting a whopping total of $295! The evening ended with Karaoke and the debut of Stuffie Squad the fresh new hit track from Elliot!

MAKE A GOOD IMPRESSION

Screen print on your new tie-dyed items (on older or spotted ones too) today at 2:00 at the craft shack. We've got some special screens of local leaves and Coop Camp logos. A whole range of ink colors is available - even black. Joy-Lily will show you how to get nice clear prints. She'll also be reminding you to CLEAN EACH SCREEN ASAP to preserve them for future years of Coop Camp.

GOING ONCE...

Don't forget to bring your auction items to King Cabin for tonight's auction. If you're bringing any special items, please let Jane know the value (or the backstory!) to drum up a good bidding war!

SIGN UP FOR TALENT SHOW!!!

Know a joke or magic trick? Have a song to sing or a story to tell? Want to deliver a stirring monologue to rival the Bard himself? Then be sure to find Shira and get your act on the list, Talent Show is absurdly close! Make sure to show your stuff!

HERE'S A GOOD TIP!

Co-op is the only group that tips the Camp Sierra staff, to show our appreciation for their hard work and good food. And, believe you me, the staff are overwhelmed by the gesture.

Traditionally, a bowl is passed around at Friday night dinner. But what if you don't carry cash? Or what if you are leaving camp earlier than Friday dinner?

Now you can submit your tip in advance! You can give cash to Rae or you can use one of the QR codes below. You can trust Rae and/or Paul to include your offering to the bowls on Friday night.

Thank you in advance for your generosity!

CHALLAH BAKE

If you're hankering for real, fresh baked Challah for this Shabbat, come to Spring House Friday morning (cerca 10-10:30 am), to take part in a communal bread-making adventure. We will mix the dough, pound it, roll it and let it rise. After lunch, we'll braid it, let it rise again, and put it in the oven. Fresh baked Challah can't be beat! Yummmmm!

See you Friday!

THE ADULT S'MORE

Come for the recipe. Stay for the wisdom.

Unpopular opinion: "gilding the lily" isn't a bad thing. In fact, being a bit "extra" is a good thing.

The masses will be intimidated and talk about your hubris, but leave the masses to attend weddings in poorly pressed shirts. You've got boas to wear, darling!

Just keep in mind the saying isn't "lilying the lily."

It's not extra to add black socks to your black sandals (you just get sad goth hippie). It's not extra to add flaxseed to chia drinks (you just get sad slimey smoothies), and it's not extra to mix three types of sugar together and call it good. This is why I've never liked S'Mores. Too much poorly pressed shirt vibe, not enough boa.

What about savory S'Mores, though? When I saw someone touting the virtues of brie S'Mores on one of my 2am doomscrolls, I sat up in my Barcalounger. Savory S'mores have all earmarks of "extra" in the good ways. Also, you don't have to wait for dessert, you can have them before dinner, or they can even be your dinner! I know. I just blew your mind, right?

Just roast over your campfire a chunk of skewered cheese: fontina, brie, halloumi, it's your thang (do what you wanna do). When it gets toasty or gooey or burny, put it on some bread or even a shortbread cookie or graham cracker. Want sweet? Top it with honey or current jam, or sliced summer fruit, or sprinkles, or honeycomb, or some good milk chocolate. Savory? Sky's the limit: arugula, prosciutto, smoked olive oil, salt, honey mustard, chopped nuts, salami, pulled pork, hummus, fava beans, or my personal favorite: more cheese (can you say stracciatella? I knew you could!)

If you're more of a traditionalist (white socks with sandals), but still like the idea of being a bit extra,

SURVIVALIST COCKTAILS

Tsan's Drink of the Day

It's been a long hike. You look up and notice the sun is beginning to set on the Sierras. That's when the panic sets in, as you realize you aren't as prepared as you thought. Can you make it back in the dark? Your iPhone battery is at 7% and you can't read the native compass anyway. You realize your lack of preparedness means you'll have to survive on your wits and what you have on hand. Worse, you have been misled: even if you can make it back to your car, Ken's lied. They don't have everything you need.

Checking your backpack, it looks grim: gin, Campari, citrus fruit, a couple sugar cubes, spring water from the stream, and a few lemons or limes. The clock is ticking and you're going to have to McGiver this shit. But you keep your wits about you, even as others are freaking out. It's not much, but you are committed to everyone's well being and there's no going back.

"Wait," says one of your fellow happy-hourers. "What about a Campari Gin Sour?"

"You ignorant slut!," you say, "Do you see any egg whites? DO you?!! Think, man! Think!"

Suddenly, a board member drives past your desperate group in a Subaru and says, "Hey, anyone need an egg?" It's the lucky break you need. There's still work to be done, but you can do it. You'll have use the spring water to make the simple syrup; the Swiss Army knife to juice the fruit, but if you pull together, you can do this. Someone correctly notes you don't have any coup glasses, and there's an audible gasp, but you've seen this before and can handle it.

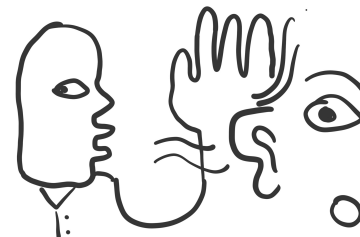

"We'll use mugs!" you exuberantly exclaim. The survivalists breathe a sigh of relief as you get to work. It's a good day.

CAMPARI GIN SOUR

1 1/2 oz gin
3/4 oz Campari
3/4 oz fresh lime juice (or lemon for more sour)
1/2 oz simple syrup
1 large egg white
Lemon peel for garnish

Shake ingredients in cocktail shaker for at least 30 seconds. Strain into coup glass or old dirty coffee mug.

RUMOR HAS IT

"I heard Christopher Benson honed his ice dying skills in Antarctica, and has brought the craft to Shaver Lake."

"That's Amor? Is it Friday, or two lovers frolicking in The Meadow??"

xoxo,
Co-op Confessional

INTERVIEW WITH A DINING HALL BENCH

Q: How many secrets have you heard?

A: All of them. Especially the loud ones whispered during spaghetti night.

Q: Any back problems?

A: I am the back problem.

STAYING ON TOP OF FOOT CARE

Keep those bare naked and sandal wearing feet healthy and prevent injury or infection by drying your feet completely after showering or swimming. In the shower or bath use a pumice stone or exfoliator then after drying apply an emollient enriched cream to prevent dry cracked skin such as OTC Kerasol Intensive Foot Repair, Eucerin Advanced Repair foot cream, CeraVe Renewing foot cream or by prescription Hydrocutis.

For more information, visit: www.apma.org

ASK AMY

Q: Describe your perfect camp tattoo.

A: The Camp Sierra sign at sunset. With the evening primrose and the hummingbird moth. It's all about the timing.

HAPPY HOUR REVIEW

Fir/Oak came correct with an excellent spread of delicious cheeses, fancy crackers, and the finest tins of fish! All of it was on a beautiful tablecloth, and the hosts made sure no cup ran empty for want of, say, a draft of ginger ale!

Next up Wedel cabin, for a slightly abbreviated happy hour (we gotta get that photo taken folks!) But that just means the same amount of fun will be crammed into slightly less time, co-op'ers are certainly capable of achieving that! Head to the Meadow, look left, and straight on up the path...

SPORTZ REPORTZ

The Giants (MLB) and the Valkyries (WNBA) both came up short at home Wednesday night, each falling in dramatic, down-to-the-wire losses. Two games within two miles—too close, no cigar. June gloom, indeed.

MLB | Fish Fry the Giants

The Marlins outlasted the Giants 8–5 in 10 innings, fueled by Otto Lopez's go-ahead single and a flurry of bonus chaos. San Francisco tied it in the ninth but got burned trying to sneak in the winning run—J.H. Lee forgot to hit turbo and was tagged out at the plate. Miami has now won three straight and their first back-to-back series of the season. Somebody check if the fish are flying.

WNBA | Martinis for Everyone

The Valkyries (now 7–7) came within a whisper of upsetting the league-leading Liberty (11–3), falling 81–78 in a Chase Center thriller. S. Ionescu struggled in her Bay Area homecoming (1-for-11 from the field), but B. Stewart steadied New York with 23 points. K. Martin led a scrappy Valkyries push with 21 and back-to-back threes, triggering the “Loud Environment” Apple Watch alert for half the crowd—but missed the buzzer beater 3 with 8 seconds left. Player of the game: Brandin Podziemski in his purple pants in the front row.

THE BERRY CONFUSION NOBODY SAW COMING

Bananas are berries, but strawberries are not. According to botanical definitions, a berry has to grow from one single flower with one ovary and contain seeds on the inside. Bananas pass the test with flying colors! They grow from one flower, have soft skin, and their tiny seeds are hidden inside. That makes them true berries in the eyes of science. Weird, right?

Meanwhile, strawberries totally fail the berry test :(They grow from a flower with multiple ovaries and keep all their seeds on the outside. So technically, they're something called an "aggregate fruit," which sounds more like gravel than dessert. Next time you're munching on fruit at snack time, just remember: science is wild, and bananas are quietly living their best berry life while strawberries are out here lying to us all.

...once around with the right elbow!

MARCIA'S MEMORIES

TURN DOWN THE VOLUME, NOT THE VIBES: COMPOSTABLE EARPLUGS

For all the campers trying to fall asleep next to a snorer with the lung power of a leaf blower, or for those who plan to attend a concert without sacrificing their hearing, listen up (but not too loud).

There's a new wave of eco-earplugs hitting the scene, and they're compostable. That means you can protect your peace and the planet at the same time.

Take GOB earplugs for example (GOB.earth). These little guys are made 100% from 'plants' (lab grown mycelium), not plastic. So after you've used them to muffle snoring bunkmates or dull the dramatic cries of a late-night raccoon fight, you can toss them into the compost instead of the trash.

Other brands are joining the fun too. Companies are rethinking single use concert gear, sleep tools, and travel accessories to be more earth-friendly and less landfill-bound.

So next time you're packing for camp, heading to a music fest, or trying to nap on a plane, consider making the sound choice.

MOUNTAIN WINDS (OVERHEARD AT CAMP)

"I love this place. It's as much a home to me as any place I've ever lived."

"We don't remember, so who cares??"

"Ice dying is a pyramid scheme"

"Ed is a macadamia nut, trying to come back to Camp"

"Happy hour can be the best meal of the day!"

MUSEUM OF THE SIERRA

Looking for something to do on bag lunch/all day hike day? Like history?

Stop by the Museum of the Sierra in Shaver.

There is a cool new digital display on the role and contributions of Buffalo Soldiers post civil war in California.

You can also find a newer large display on the hydroelectric power plant just a short walk from the main museum building.

FROM AN ANONYMOUS CAMPER

Mysterious Pole Dancers (MPD) coming soon.

...and the other way back with the left elbow!

DOUBLE LODGE OUT OF GIN

Nothing more to say. If we hear more, we'll let you know.

HOROSCOPES

Aries: You're a camp legend. You just haven't been caught yet.

Taurus: Stick to your trail mix. Trust no one with raisins.

Gemini: You're the king or queen of the campfire circle tonight. Own that crown.

Cancer: You tackle the day head-on, just watch out for low-hanging branches.

Leo: You check your list twice, but the best moments aren't on any list.

Virgo: Perfection isn't possible. Except in your cabin's sweeping chore.

Libra: Don't weigh every decision. Just leap into the swimming hole.

Scorpio: Your aura glows like bioluminescent algae. That's a compliment.

Sagittarius: Today, the trail will test you. Mostly your sense of direction.

Capricorn: Be the rock others cling to. Especially at the Potholes.

Aquarius: Your ideas flow like icy stream water. Refreshing and slightly dangerous.

Pisces: Dream of fish. Be the fish. Fear the fishing line.
