

DAY'S CALENDAR

8:00 am – Breakfast (Dining Hall)

9:15 am – Forest Discussion (Rec Hall)

10:00 am – Lynda Beagle Rememberance (Rec Hall)

11:00 am – Camp Evaluation (Rec Hall)

12:30 pm – Lunch (Dining Hall)

5:00 pm – Shabbat Happy Hour (Circle Lodge)

6:00 pm – Dinner (Dining Hall)

7:30 pm – Talent Show & Camp Awards (Rec Hall)

After Talent Show – “Truth or Dab” Camp Game (Rec Hall)

After Talent Show - Folk Dancing (Rec Hall)

Header Weather

Daylight and dawn are happening sometime around 5:45 these days.

Honestly, this is what we've been waiting for... high of 74°F.

Cool... low of 52°F.

Gonna be a little smokey. Hope you like cocktail wieners.

Camp Evaluation

Come to the Camp Evaluation tomorrow so we can talk about how badly Noah messed up this year by not bringing Whiskey. And, anything else on your mind.

Thank You Camp Sierra Staff!

Big tip for tonight: big your wallet to tip night! Don't mean to start a big fight, but Co-ops are the only group to tip right. So let's keep the Camp tight.

But in all seriousness – come thank the staff at dinner tonight. They've worked really hard for us all week!

...Big Spenders: At It Again

Rae Wedel lost her mind and spent $300 on a piece of pottery that she has not seen. Let's hope it's not broken, it's hard to get insurance around here.

Biglin's education endeavors were dashed by Jennifer's cold hard cash (and the fact that she was willing to pay more than twice what he was willing to pay).

It could be seen as a little odd that Ed bought a shirt that said “don't grab my pussy.” But the tie-dye was GREAT.

Amy & Steve stuck around a day longer than intended, and they inspired higher bids JUST with their presence. Ask Amy to find out her means and methods.

Stephen, Evan, and James rocked it! Initial reports coming from our King Cabin field staff report the auction raised ONE MILLION DOLLARS. That should buy us a few more bricks, right?

Does Co-op Have Talent?*

Come to the Rec Hall at 7:30 to find out. And, increase the odds of a positive outcome by adding your act to the lineup.

The answer is definitely yes.*

Where Have All the Flowers Gone?

Thursday at the Swimmin' Hole's “Flower Island”

Happy Hour Happynings

It is our editorial review that the Shadrack Happy Hour was Happiest. But there's one final contender to throw into the Circle... so let's see what they got (at Circle, right on).

Lynda Beagle Rememberance

If anyone would like to say a final word (or three) remembering Lynda, please join James at the Rec Hall at 10 AM. A few words will be said, then ashes will be spread at Proffit Circle and Toad House.

Breaking News: Co-op Campers Solve Age Old Question

Turns out that a tree that falls in the forest does make a sound—as long as it hits a chapel. Last night, our intrepid reporter recorded a loud crash just after midnight. The noise remained a mystery until later that morning, when the damage was discovered. The old tree which was at the top of the sports field, which had shuffled off its mortal coil years ago, fell over, striking the indoor chapel with a glancing blow on the side of the roof. Damage appears minimal from the outside, but we await a real inspection. What all this entails for our annual all-camp picture remains to be seen as of this writing.

Update: all Camp Photo will be upside down this year.

Follow Up To Water Discussion

People at the water talk requested additional resources. So have at em!

Things to read and watch:

Cadillac Desert, by Marc Reisner

Probably the best (and longest) storybook of water in California. I can't recommend this enough. For an abridged version, watch the documentary, available multiple places on YouTube under the same name.
<https://tinyurl.com/CoopCampWater>

A Dreamt Land, by Mark Arax

An unofficial update to Cadillac Desert, about the last 40 years of CA water projects and evolving sentiments.

Slow it, Spread it, Sink It

A guidebook for how to conserve water, harvest rain and restore your local watershed on your own property.
<https://sonomarc.org/wp-content/uploads/2017/06/Slow-it-Spread-it-Sink-it-Store-it.pdf>

Trees in Paradise, by Jared Farmer

A history of California told in chapters of the trees that made it famous: Redwoods, Citrus, Eucalyptus and Palm

Groups and mailing lists to get involved:

Community Alliance with Family Farmers (CAFF)

For finding your farmer, and getting politically involved to push our food systems toward sustainability <https://caff.org/>

California Coastkeeper Alliance (and their regional affiliates) To be made aware of opportunities for political action on environmental protection and river restoration. Particularly good if you want to get feisty, these folks love suing to enact environmental protections.
<https://cacoastkeeper.org/>

Mavens Notebook

THE mailing list for keeping up to date on California water politics. Beware, treat this list like the potholes, at a moments notice this list can unleash a torrent of water (articles). <https://mavensnotebook.com/>

Don't Look Up

If you want to feel similar to how the dinosaurs felt, without feeling as the dinosaurs felt: there will be a killer asteroid passing over earth at 6:45 AM tomorrow (Saturday).

Apparently the best place to view it in the United States is in Hawaii, so let's all meet there.

The Japanese Wet Noodle

Tsan's Drink of the Day

We all know that one camper: doesn't folk dance but enjoys the show, won't participate in inane discussions about cooperativism in the late 1960s, doesn't get messy at the tie-dye event, refuses to write off people the rest of us are gossiping about over cheap wine. Or maybe that's just me doing the gossiping. Anyway, s/he's that camper who nudges you to get your fees in, but in the background is moving heaven and earth to keep camp alive. You know: the camper who just "gets shit done" and doesn't expect an attaperson. I mean, just your proverbial wet noodle, amirite?

This drink is dedicated to those in the background who get it done. Y'all know who I'm talkinbout in 2024, but we'll let that person organize in peace. Instead, I'm dedicating this one to the original camp OG, EJ, Kashiwase, who did not suffer anyone's crap.

This drink is an updo on one I had at a cocktail event. The original one called for liqueurs and drizzles, but that was too much fuss for the same damned drink. To be clear, this drink – like its namesake – is no B.S., but it's also not dragon's breath. Neither your cloyingly sweet sorority girl elixir that will have your bestie holding your hair while you pay homage to the porcelain gods; nor your straight shot of Jack Daniel's that'll give you a Tennessee "hug" as it eats out your innards, the Japanese Wet Noodle is adult, unique, and refreshing. Here's how to make it, but buckle up, people: this one takes planning . . . you can't just show TF up and expect it to be done.

You'll need a blender, a very strong person, or a hippie natural foods store nearby, because this calls for cucumber juice and there's no substitute (except one time I substituted Dr. Brown's Cel-Ray and it was off the chain, but Ken's doesn't sell that). In a shaker, combine 2 oz of coconut rum, 1 oz pineapple juice, 3 dashes lime juice (about a tsp), ½ tsp toasted sesame oil, and 1 oz cucumber juice (blend a whole cucumber in 12 oz water and strain, or muddle cucumber in a glass with 4 oz water and strain). Shake with ice, strain into a martini glass, and add a few toasted sesame seeds on top. Cherry is optional. Cheers.

The Old Shaver Dam

Re-printing of an article originally run in The Fresno Bee (February 14, 2012) ... thanks, Jennifer for the archives!

The draining of Shaver Lake for repairs this winter presented a once-in-a-lifetime chance to revisit history. The old Shaver dam, hidden from sight for decades, was fully exposed for a few weeks.

It was a reminder of the lumber trade and ingenuity that helped shape the development of the Central Valley.

Before Fresno County was established, lumbermen discovered the rich timberland of the southern Sierra Nevada. Seeking their fortunes in pine, fir and cedar, they built numerous small sawmills in the Shaver Lake area, then known as Pine Ridge.

They faced a steep challenge: how to transport logs to market in the valley. Heavy freight wagons negotiated the twisting, narrow Tollhouse Road, with treacherous grades of 40% in places. The road was nicknamed "the beast killer" for the oxen that died on the way.

An early sawmill firm had an idea to get around Tollhouse Road: build a flume to carry the lumber on rushing water. But the flume proved too leaky and the group ran out of money.

Michigan lumbermen Charles B. Shaver and Lewis P. Swift saw great potential when they arrived in 1891. Convinced that with proper engineering they could succeed, they secured the rights to the original flume company and renamed it the Fresno Flume and Irrigation Company. They hired civil engineer John Eastwood to design a new flume, while Swift designed and built the sawmill.

Disaster struck soon after the mill went up. An earthen dam, built on the Stevenson Creek to form the millpond (the first Shaver Lake) and provide water for the flume, was washed away in a huge storm. Undaunted, Shaver and Swift started work on the centerpiece of the operation, a substantial rock-filled dam costing $16,000, in the summer of 1892.

But Mother Nature had her way again when this dam, not quite completed, was swept away in a flash flood that winter. The Fresno Expositor reported: "The noise was beyond description, causing the ground to tremble. The rolling of boulders that weighed hundreds of tons added to the roar of the water. Trees were snapped like straws." The sawmill, a hotel and townsite were a complete loss.

Shaver and Swift again pressed forward, rebuilding the mill and dam in mid-1893. The dam - the one exposed this winter - was an engineering marvel.

Boulders were packed with dirt into a framework of vertical and horizontal timbers behind an overlapping double layer of 3- by 12-inch boards. It provided a nearly water-tight barrier as the wood swelled, like an oak barrel filled with whiskey.

Investors poured $300,000 into the operation that started with the dam and sawmill and continued with the 42-mile flume to a Clovis finishing plant. The mill site, named Shaver, boomed with stores, saloons, a blacksmith shop, hotel and houses. The "Michigan," a small steamboat much like the one featured in the Humphrey Bogart classic film, "The African Queen," served the mill as a tug, towing logs across the millpond - Shaver Lake - for many years. In it's off duty, it was used as an excursion vessel, touring visitors around the lake. It was named for Shaver and Swift's home state.

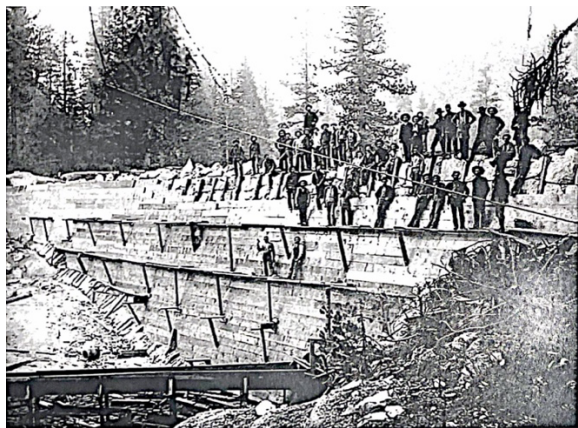

During its 26-year run, the mill cut 450 million board feet of lumber - said to be enough to build a large city - and played a prominent role in Fresno County's economic development. The mill closed in 1914 after the peak of the industry had passed. Southern California Edison bought the property and adjoining land in 1919 to supply water to its Big Creek hydro-electric plant.

In 1927, the utility built a new, much bigger dam downstream from the old one. The old sawmill and numerous buildings were burned down before the expanded lake was filled.

Among the remnants exposed when the lake was drained: giant iron drive wheels which set saw blades whirring, and the little steamer "Michigan," still resting in place at the doc where it was left when the lake as filled. And build into the base of the old dam, on the north side, was a little house, the only structure to survive the fire.

Inside the tiny building, the valve that controlled the water level of the lake was still at work. Left in the open position, the large iron valve wheel allowed the icy water of Stevenson Creek to flow through the damn after 85 years, make a picturesque waterfall, if only for a brief time.

Addendum: Regarding the 1892 photograph of the dam during construction: the photographer, likely form a Fresno studio, is unknown, hired by Shaver and Swift to document a proud moment and a key piece of their operation: the ingeniously designed dam. Little did these craftsmen realize that in a few months the dam would largely be swept away, and a would necessitate them building it a second time. A special thanks for the photograph's preservation to the family of Fresno pioneer Edwin Eaton and to the Pop Lavel Foundation - which generously provided the high resolution scan from the original.

Then: Workmen pose for a photograph in the summer of 1892 on the wood face of the rock-filled Shaver sawmill dam.

Now: Sections of the wood face of the old dam, still in place, exposed when the lake was drained. These thick boards, combined with a framework of timbers inside the dam's structure - also visible - helped make the dam fairly watertight.

Mountain Winds (Overheard at Camp)

"You paced your underwear accordingly. Now it's chaos"

"Strange things happen at midnight"

"What day of the week is next Saturday?"

"Hopefully we will all have that nuclear war beforehand."

"For a moment there I thought I was gonna get stuck with those tapes for $40."

"That's a Tullamore Dew commercial? It sounds like one of the folk dances"

"Karaoke is best served dark."

Ringin the (Wedding) Bells

You may have heard that a couple of zany kids are getting hitched later this summer in the Portland area. If you'd like to wish them well with a cherry pitter, a corn cob stripper, The Lord Of The Rings : Rivendell advanced lego set group gift, or something else entirely, check out this link!

Your Star Is Born

Aries: Somebody's gotta juggle... that could be you!

Taurus: Shake(speare) a leg. Bust out some old Willy.

Gemini: I doubt you brought a uni-cycle, but if you did... can't think of a better time to whip it out!

Cancer: You're already cast as the titular role. If you haven't memorized Othello already, you have 11 hours so pitter patter.

Leo: You know everyone at Camp. Take the clue: impressions are so hot right now.

Virgo: Pick a partner, improv is your inspiration.

Libra: Vacation slides. You know what to do.

Scorpio: The popcorn will be freshest at 8:27. Beat the rush: reserve your bag on Uber eats.

Sagittarius: A centaur has hooked you: slam some poetry.

Capricorn: Observational comedy is always a winner; start reading the Twin Pines and go from there.

Aquarius: Danger lurks inside. Best to sit this one on the porch.

Pisces: Relive your week via interpretive dance. Everyone will love it and know exactly what you mean.

Clear Your Mind and Fill Your Inbox

After the Camp Evaluation, you've got one last chance to get out what's on your mind. Write an article for our final Twin Pines of 2024: TwinPinesPaper@gmail.com

And, if you find yourself squinting at the printed photos in this fine publication, open up the online rendition for full color copies. Subscribe with the QR code above!

Crossword Solution

ALERT: RATTLES in the POTHOLES AREA CAUSED WILD OWLETS to HOP OUT!

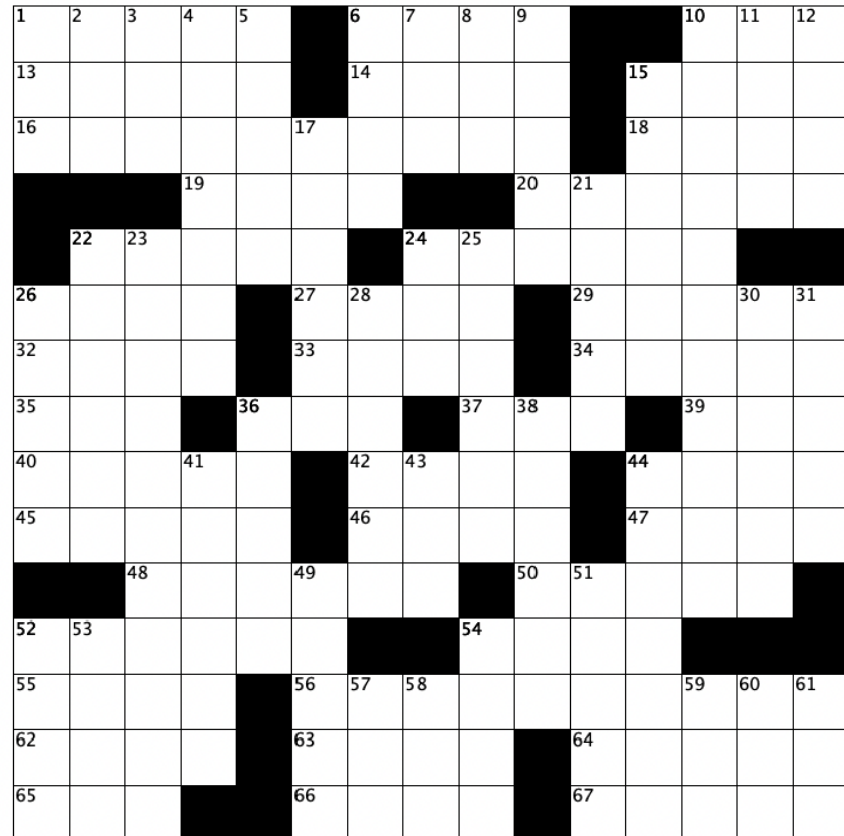

T	E	L	L		R	A	W			I	S	A	A	C
A	R	E	A		E	R	A			C	H	I	N	O
P	O	T	H	O	L	E	S			E	A	R	T	H
S	S	S		W	I	N				T	A	K	E	I
				C	L	E	A	R		A	G	E
P	A	R	I	E	S		A	R	R	E	S	T	E	D
A	L	E	R	T		S	T	E	P		P	A	R	R
R	I	S	C		S	A	T	E	S		E	U	R	O
K	E	E	L		W	I	L	D		C	A	N	O	N
A	N	T	E	C	E	D	E			S	A	R	T	R
				L	A	P		S	T	O	R	E
H	O	P	O	U	T			R	I	O		A	F	L
T	H	U	D	S			B	A	R	B	E	C	U	E
T	I	N	G	E			I	C	E		R	I	N	G
P	O	K	E	D			T	E	E		A	D	D	S

Solution to Thursday's crossword

TALENT SHOW NOTES FOR A TALENT SHOW
FUTURE.

ACROSS

1. Book of photos
6. Pronto (Abbr.)
10. Graduate School of Business (Abbr.)
13. Charles' late wife
14. Sandwich shop
15. Fly like an eagle
16. Camp building
18. Ring ____
19. Edsel or Henry
20. Did a stevedor's job
22. Greek market
24. Take a weapon from
26. Variant of 26 Down
27. Charlie with a #1 son
29. Horses' gaits
32. Type of school paper
33. Hearing organs
34. Eagle's nest
35. Left-side typewriter key
36. Four-term president (Abbr.)
37. Sue Grafton's "____ for Innocent"
39. Nuclear Magnetic Resonance (Abbr.)
40. How you might sing if you don't know the words (3 words)
42. Kind of brake
44. San Francisco's ____ 39
45. Fit for a king
46. Old stringed instrument
47. "To Live and Die ____"
48. Short literary works
50. Loose, as pants
52. Pale color
54. Any of four British art galleries
55. Rudolph Valentino, for one
56. Grassy Camp area
62. Eensy
63. German Mister
64. Delhi's land
65. Advanced Technology Group (Abbr.)

66. The Thin Man's dog
67. One includes "My cup runneth over"
24. ____ es Salaam
25. Demand
26. Perfume ingredient
28. Once in a blue moon
30. Up-to-date
31. Father Junipero
36. Untrue
38. Cold pack
41. "In conclusion..."
43. Integrated Utility Services (Abbr.)
44. Homing birds
49. Greek letter
51. Old science fiction film "____ to the Moon"
52. Pocket bread
53. Mine entrance
54. Actress Banks
57. "____ Miserables"
58. Linkletter
59. Universal Data Access (Abbr.)
60. Nothing
61. Huntington structure

DOWN

1. Put 2 and 2 together
2. 52 to a Roman
3. Prohibit
4. Soldier's garb
5. "To the ____ Born"
6. Ritalin target
7. Mediterranean, for one
8. Not just some
9. What we all take
10. "____ Campers!"
11. Not crazy
12. Born and ____
15. Van Gogh's "____ Night"
17. Appeared, as on a cover
21. Novelist Joyce Carol
22. Military term for Relax!
23. All-Camp meeting staple

Co-op Colors

